

Chapter 1811

Zayn knew that in terms of loving Aino, nobody loved her more than Sebastian. The reason Sebastian let Holden go was because he had thought it through from all aspects and wanted to give Aino the best chance to survive.

Speaking of that, Sebastian cleared his throat and his voice sounded even more miserable than before. "At the very least, Holden cares for Aino. I only bank on this love he has for Aino and try my best not to anger him." There was a pause before Sebastian raised his hands and covered his face. "I hope...I hope that my Aino...

could come back alive." He said hands and covered his face. "I hope...I hope that my Aino... could come back alive." There was a lump in his throat as he said that.

He was a man, the person with the highest authority in the Ford Group, and a man who had reigned South City for almost eight years. He had never cried growing up, but at this moment, Sebastian's voice was choked up. Sabrina was heartbroken when she saw her man like that. She leaned on Sebastian's shoulders and cried inconsolably. To a family, if their child was abducted that the family would have collapsed, even if the head of the family was Sebastian.

"All of you just go home." said collapsed, even if the head of the family was Sebastian.

"All of you, just go home," said Sebastian weakly.

"Sebastian, we'll stay here to take care of you and Sabrina," said Zayn.

Alex nodded. "Yes, Sebastian. Now is the time when you and Sabrina needed to be taken care of the most. How could we just go home?"

The rest of them agreed and none of them was willing to leave.

However, Sebastian shook his head firmly. "Everyone has a phone. We'll keep in contact through the phone. All of you just go home first. Let us be phone. We'll keep in contact through the phone. All of you just go home first. Let us be alone."

"Okay. If there is anything, we'll stay in touch through the phone. We'll take our leave first," Alex finally said.

They left Sebastian's house, but all of them actually never left the neighborhood. That night, all of them sat in their cars downstairs at Sebastian's house and did not even sleep a wink through the night.

That night, Sebastian and Sabrina sat in their living room and hugged each other. They did not say anything.

"Sabrina," Sabrina said with a hoarse voice. "Do you still able to shine. As the lights landed on Sebastian's strong and masculine face, tears could be seen streaming down from his eyes.

"Sebastian, do you believe in me?" asked Sabrina.

Sebastian did not say anything. He just hugged Sabrina tightly.

"I can take care of Aino and I can deliver my second child smoothly. I can weather the storm. Do you believe in me, Sebastian?" asked Sabrina.

Sebastian still did not say a single word. He just hugged Sabrina tightly in his arms and shook his head aggressively.

"I can't live without Aino, Sebastian."

"I can't live without Aino, Sebastian."

"I can't live without Aino too."

"I will bring Aino, myself, as well as our child, back. Believe in me, Sebastian," said Sabrina as she cried. Sebastian shook his head and still did not say a word.

"I don't do things that I'm uncertain of. You know that. Six years ago, I was also in a dangerous position, but I still fought the rights for the child in my belly. No matter when, even if at the worst times, I will still consider my own safety. I had never given up on the hope to survive at all. Sebastian, I have a very strong will to live.

uncertain of. You know that. Six years ago, I was also in a dangerous position, but I still fought the rights for the child in my belly. No matter when, even if at the worst times, I will still consider my own safety. I had never given up on the hope to survive at all. Sebastian, I have a very strong will to live.

Right at that moment, the ringing tone of a phone sounded in the empty and quiet room. Without even thinking twice, Sabrina answered the call. "Hello! Is it Holden?"